

Who reads PHILLY TECH?

Tom Kramlik

Title: Advisory Desktop Engineer / Office 2000 Product Owner, Forté Systems LLC, West Chester

Age: 32

Hometown: Sellersville

What is your last accomplishment? Working at a client site where we successfully rolled out MS Outlook '98 to 15,000 users around the world, replacing their existing MS Mail and Lotus Notes systems. We turned off the two old systems and turned on the new system over one weekend.

Why do you read PhillyTech? PhillyTech is a great source for information about upcoming companies and people that are in our local area. With the Web being such a dominant force, it is great to know about the local companies that are major players. There is good information on niche technology, local user groups and events, all within a short drive from us. I always find something in each issue that directly applies to me.

What is the most innovative technology you've seen?

The audio and video capabilities of the Web have drastically improved in the last six months alone. If you can't attend a technical conference, or want to review some information from it, you can often view the audio and video from the conference on your own PC in amazingly good quality, permitting you have a good connection speed. Movie reviews and trailers, music, lyrics and music videos are often available on the Web in their entirety.

What are your three favorite bookmarks? Ziff Davis Net (www.zdnet.com)
Microsoft Certified Professional Magazine Online (www.mcpmag.com)
Penn State Football (www.psu.edu/sports/football).
